ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Melanie Randolph Miller began studying American history after obtaining an undergraduate degree in aeronautical engineering from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and a juris doctor from the University of California at Berkeley. She spent many years as an attorney, most recently in international law and policy at the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA). She began her doctorate in history at George Washington University while still working at the FAA, and her experience in the international arena made her all the more interested in the subject of Gouverneur Morris's diplomatic career. She has taught at Ithaca College and lives in Ithaca, New York, with her husband, David Archung, and her little daughter, Molly.
